How to Play 7 Up 7 Down — Rules, Buttons and the Real Odds

> You play 7 Up 7 Down by placing chips while the 30-second timer runs, then two dice are rolled and every spot that matches their sum pays its printed odds.

The full guide, a free practice round and the bonus: 7up7down.co.in/how-to-play/

Questions people ask

Which rules decide a 7 Up 7 Down round? If a round fails on the game's side, it is void. If your connection drops, the bet you placed still stands.

What do the buttons do? Each spot takes up to 200 at the rupee table, and the smallest chip is 10.

How does Crit change a payout? After bets close, any bet can receive Crit — an extra multiplier from the game's Extra Pay. It can lift the top payout of a round to 1000X. It is random and the studio does not publish its frequency, so you cannot aim for it; it simply makes some wins larger than the table shows.

Why does 7 pay 1:4 when it is the most common sum? Because it is still only one sum against two wide ranges. Count the ways two dice land: 6 of 36 make 7, while 15 make 2–6 and 15 make 8–12. DOWN and UP each win more than twice as often as 7, so they pay even money, and 7 pays four times the chip to make up for hitting less often. The exact sums follow the same logic: 6 and 8 have five ways each and pay 1:5, while 2 and 12 have just one way each and pay 1:26. In every case the payout is a little lower than the true odds — that small gap is how the table earns, and Crit is how the game gives some of it back.

Is there a 7 Up 7 Down trick or prediction tool? No. Every roll is a fresh pair of dice: after five DOWN results in a row, the next roll is still DOWN 15 times out of 36. PDFs, "calculators" and prediction apps read the same history bar you can see above the table, and history does not move the dice.

Where can I practise 7 Up 7 Down for free? The practice table on this page keeps the same layout and odds, with credits instead of rupees and without Crit. Try a few rounds on DOWN, then a few on 2 and 12, and the difference in swings is easy to see. The button under the table opens the real game.
